Issue number two. Considering that we never thought issue number one was going to see the light of day, the fact that you are holding issue number two in your hands is a big deal to us! We'd like to thank all the people that made our premiere issue such a success, as well as all the people that helped us put this issue together by sending flicks in. We'd like to specially thank the Walters family and our wife and girlfriend for putting up with our shit. We got an unbelievable amount of positive response about our "editorial" in the first issue. We are still trying to feature as wide a sample of writers as possible, so send us flicks. Our next issue will be freights and trains only. All flicks mailed become property of the magazine and can't be returned. No dark, blurry or overexposed stuff, please.

I would like to dedicate this issue to FUELER ONE, who passed away last May. He never got a chance to fully develop as a person or as a writer; his chance to experience life to the fullest was taken from him. He was just a kid whose life was cut short by some asshole with a gun. Those of us lucky enough to have known him, will miss him greatly. Sometimes we forget that behind every name we see on a wall or a train, there is a person. This person was a dear friend of mine, who had a family, friends, hopes and dreams, just like the rest of us. Beyond graffiti and Fueler; crews and beef, there was my friend Joe. You will be missed, Rest In Peace.

Joseph Maselli III

05.12.1979 - 05.22.2000

With the loss of FUELER comes a great loss to many across the world. He left his mark everywhere he went, from his hometown of New Orleans to London, New York and many other places. I don't just mean his tag. When people met Joe, they met a real person. There were no fronts with FUEL. Joe put his all into writing. From his tags and fill-ins to his pieces; even the night he died. Those of us who knew Joe can be proud to have known such a energetic, incredible person. Those who didn't know him should ask someone who did.

peace,
